To be the hands and feet of Jesus

Meditation

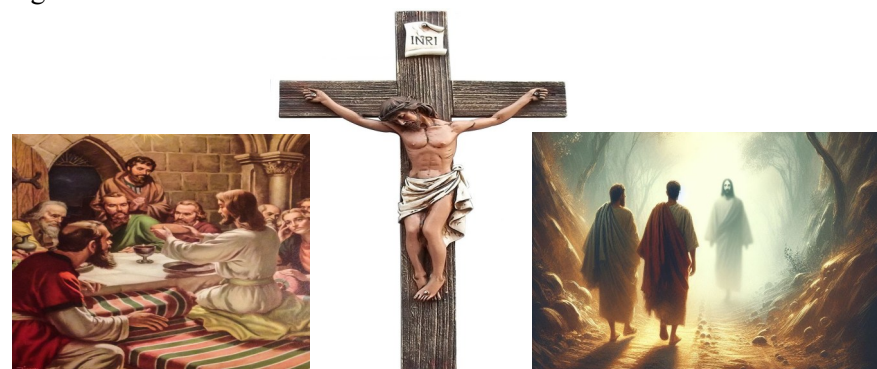

The communion table may be considered a peace table - for by its symbols of bread and wine. We remember what the Prince of Peace accomplished - making our peace with God through His blood shed on the cross.

Forgiveness is willingness to bear the consequences of another's sin. The greatest joy lies in doing it for love. God did this for us at Calvary.

When we were wounded and not able to bear the burden of our own sins, Jesus took the burden from us and bore it for us.

He was willing to bear the consequences of our sins all the way to the Cross. In Communion we remember His sacrifice and the WAY it was made - not grudgingly but joyfully. He did so in true love.

As we remember His sacrifice, let us examine ourselves for we are to go and do likewise.

New Meaning

Rather than change Passover, Christ fulfilled it (1 Cor.5:7), infusing a time-honored practice with profound new meaning. For centuries, the unleavened bread had reminded God's people of their hasty exit from Egypt. Now the bread would remind Jesus' followers of his body, given as a sacrifice for their sins. The lamb had recalled the blood that spared the Israelites from death. Now the cup would remind Jesus' followers of his blood given for us, his death purchasing our eternal life.
