What did it mean to those who came?

We went to the beach for date night and talked for 5 hours and read the first 2 chapters of our new book Fighting Fair. "Life changing."

I'm going to recommit myself to viewing my wife for who she is, a precious gift from a loving God. I will serve, pursue, and cherish her in a way that builds her up.

We now believe that we have something that we can impart to couples as well.

Wife, married 3 years

I wish we would have done this 28 years ago! We will be married 30 yrs in April

This getaway made a huge impact on our marriage. I loved having time to step away from the noise of life to intentionally focus on each other. It was a beautiful weekend set aside to really focus on us, what brought us together and how we can love each other better. There were so many quotable moments, "your spouse is not your enemy" was a great reminder.

So much! But if I had to choose one thing, it would be that I was not alone. There are thousands of other wives and mothers needing God's help to navigate the deep waters of marriage. I learned that God is powerful enough to rescue us ALL. There is hope.

We rekindled our friendship. We were best friends before spouses, and we have found that again. We do such a good job as individuals to schedule and prepare our work, our children, our time within our church, our relationships, and we were able to see last night that we do not do it for ourselves and committed to changing that. It started with booking a vacation next month! Our first in 4 years.
