

Zebra's February Newsletter

Dear Families,

Three-year-olds are naturally creative. They are not limited by the boundaries of conformity and social expectations. Over the next few weeks, our classroom will become an incubator for creativity. We will explore creative things kids can do, turn recycled objects into treasures, conduct experiments to make new discoveries, and design and build structures. Be ready to think creatively at home when your child challenges you to become a puppeteer or to test gravity.

Math

In this unit, we will continue to focus on one-to-one correspondence. Children will be matching sets of objects to determine if the sets are equal. They will match children to paintbrushes, bubble blowers to bubbles, puppets to fingers, and cookies to milk.
