Issue 25: March 3, 2026

FROM THE PRINCIPAL

The Science Fair is finally here!

Parents, we know you've played an integral role in your child's project these past weeks. With your help, students have been busy contemplating questions, gathering materials and collecting data. Kudos to you!

Science Fairs, while labor intensive, are important! Helping students go through the motions of the scientific process is incredibly important. They will use this method throughout their years of schooling, even in college if they ever have to do a thesis or dissertation. So these first baby steps, while frustrating at times, are key.

Your child is learning to ask:

- What am I curious about and what do I want to know?
- What do I already know?
- How will I measure what I want to know?
- What did I learn?
- What do I want to know next?

And while they're taking those baby steps, you can keep reminding yourself: "It's the process, not the product!" Your child's logbook/charts/project board may not be perfect, but they will have learned SO much!

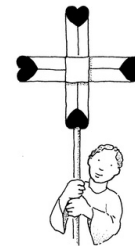

Looking forward to seeing all of you on Friday for our Science Fair/Open House: 6:30-8:00.

Blessings on your week!
Dr. Fink
