Sermon Notes

2 Corinthians 11:16-33 NRSV | Written by Rev. Dr. Alf Halvorson

This is the first of four messages in part two of our 2 Corinthians study post-Christmas and post-Vision to Reality series. We want to finish what Paul started with this group of believers, but it won't be without challenges. Paul was asked by the Church in Corinth to supply his credentials because other rival leaders had come and said they could outdo Paul's apostleship. So he plays their game for a little while, but then upends the process by articulating what he believes to be the true marks of discipleship and how an authentic apostle lives and serves.

1. Are you prone to comparison, susceptible to wondering if and how you stack up to others? In what ways do you compare yourself to people? When you do, do you normally come out worse, better, or about the same as your "rivals"?
2. Read 2 Cor. 11:16-33. What does Paul think of his rivals and alternative leaders of the Corinthian congregation in verses 18-21? Why didn't or wouldn't Paul play those games?
3. In verses 22-23, Paul answers the accusation that he isn't from the right stock. Do those three criteria seem appropriate to you or not? If not, why not? Why might they be a big deal to Paul's attackers?
4. In verses 23b-29, Paul offers alternative credentials for his apostleship. Do they impress you or not? Why would Paul share his weaknesses or sufferings or afflictions? What do they communicate that matters to him? And how do they model Christ's life and death?
5. I explained in my message what verses 30-33 might mean contextually to Paul's audience. Paul is an anti-hero here. Why does he accentuate the negative? This is a teaser for next week, but in 2 Cor. 12:9, Paul says Jesus said to him, "My grace is sufficient for you, for power is made perfect in weakness." What does he mean? Is that true in your life? What is required for God's power to connect with our weakness? As you close in prayer, admit your need(s) before God and ask for God's great mercy, grace, aide, love, power, and hope.

Remember Our Frontline Mission Partners
