A message from Pastor David

"Thus says the Lord God: 'I myself will search for my sheep, and will seek them out.' I will rescue them from all the places to which they have been scattered on a day of clouds and thick darkness. I myself will be the shepherd of my sheep, and I will make them lie down, says the Lord God. I will seek the lost, and I will bring back the strayed, and I will bind up the injured, and I will strengthen the weak, but the fat and the strong I will destroy. I will feed them with justice." (Ezekiel 34:11, 15, 16)

In 1965, six young boys ran away from home, stole a boat, and headed out hastily in search of Fiji from their homeland of Tonga (some five hundred miles away). They took a sack of food and a small gas burner stove, but no map or compass. Due to their amateur sailing skills and the unfriendly seas, they were lost, adrift for eight days, until they finally spotted land. They ended up on the deserted island of Ata. They were stranded there for fifteen months.

Australian Captain Peter Werner happened upon them during a return sail from the capital of Tonga. Casually focusing his binoculars at a nearby Ata Island, which was thought to be uninhabited, he noticed a burned patch of ground. He said, "I thought, that's strange that a fire should start in the tropics on an uninhabited island. So, we decided to investigate further."

As they approached, they saw a teenage boy rushing into the water toward them; five more quickly followed. When the boy reached the boat, he told Mr. Werner that he and his friends had been stranded for more than a year, living off the land and trying to signal passing ships for help.

Werner delivered them back home; they were arrested for stealing the boat they had "borrowed." Werner took pity on them and paid the boat owner $200 to get the kids off the hook. Werner quit his job in Sydney and stayed in Tonga long-term. He started a fishing business there and hired the shipwrecked boys as his crew. Werner became their mentor and built a friendship with some of the boys. Some of them remained friends the rest of his life. One of the boys said, after several decades of friendship, "[Werner] was like a father to me" (adapted from Nijay K. Gupta, 15 New Testament Words of Life (Zondervan Academic, 2022) pp. 121-122).

Werner helps us to see what the Lord does for us. We see God's grace at work in our lives. "I myself will be the shepherd of my sheep, and I will make them lie down, says the Lord God." It's the Lord that calls us back to Himself. It is the Lord who intervenes and gives us hope. When we look at Ezekiel 34:11-16, we see God at work in our lives. We see his Hand in all that happens, because He loves us. There aren't any coincidences. With the eyes of faith, we see God living and active, bringing about hope and new life every day. God uses His Holy Spirit to bring about growth. This is also called sanctification.

"This life, therefore, is not righteousness, but growth in righteousness, not health, but healing, not being, but becoming, not rest, but exercise. We are not yet what we shall be, but we are growing toward it. The process is not yet finished, but it is going on. This is not the end, but it is the road. All does not yet gleam in glory, but all is being purified" (Martin Luther, "Defense and Explanation of All the Articles" LW vol. 32).

Luther clearly states, "There is no justification without sanctification, no forgiveness without renewal of life, no real faith from which the fruits of new obedience do not grow." We need to hear the Gospel every day. We are called to die to ourselves and live to God through faith in Christ Jesus our Lord. Our lives are not a process of reaching higher in holiness that we may claim it for ourselves, but rather dying to our sinful self daily and submitting...

...to God's will in our lives. "Lord, Thy will be done" we pray in the Lord's Prayer. This is how Jesus taught His disciples to pray. It never begins with myself. It always begins and ends in Christ, through the power of the Holy Spirit living in us to His glory!

"LORD search us out, and guide our path that we may see Your Holy Spirit at work in our lives every day."

An Invitation to Thanksgiving

By Nikki Jackson

Thanksgiving is an American tradition rooted in the belief that blessings are not merely to be enjoyed, but acknowledged with gratitude. Long before it became synonymous with Pilgrims, turkey, and a November feast, thanksgiving was a public expression of gratitude to God for the harvest, peace, liberty, and the preservation of the nation.

Eau Claire has a long history of celebrating Thanksgiving. Newspaper articles from the 1880s and 1890s describe collections and distributions of food for those in need. The emphasis was on feeding the hungry, reflecting Jesus' words in Mark 14:7: "The poor you will always have with you, and you can help them any time you want."

Perhaps that emphasis was partly because Thanksgiving Day itself was structured differently than it is today. The day typically began with a church service giving thanks to God. Afternoons were spent gathering with others or sharing a meal, while evenings were enjoyed at home or at one of the many balls and dances held throughout the community. Thanksgiving was, in many ways, a more communal occasion.

Charitable organizations focused on getting food and ingredients into the hands of those who needed them, rather than organizing large community dinners. One can imagine families, neighbors, and congregations extending invitations to those who had nowhere else to go.

This tradition continued for decades. It wasn't until 1987 that I could find the first advertisements for a "free Thanksgiving dinner" in Eau Claire. Not so long ago when...

...you think about it! Those meals were offered by the Salvation Army, then led by Major Howard Palomaki and located at 102 W. Grand Avenue, now home to the Chippewa Valley Theatre Guild. The goal was to feed not only the hungry, but also the lonely.

The following year, a young businessman named Terry Weld partnered with Triniteam to open the doors of his restaurant, Houligans, for Thanksgiving. (If that name sounds familiar, it's because Weld later served on the Eau Claire City Council from 2017 to 2023.) According to the Leader-Telegram, while Houligans provided the food, Triniteam was responsible for identifying those who needed not only a meal, but also companionship – people who might otherwise spend the holiday alone.

Jesus himself spoke of this kind of hospitatlity in Luke 14:13-14, encouraging his followers to invite the poor, the crippled, the lame, and the blind to their banquets – not for anything they might receive in return, but simply to extend kindness and generosity.

And perhaps that marked a turning point.

Thanksgiving outreach was no longer just about providing sustenance. It was also about providing a sense of belonging and community. Perhaps the need for fellowship had never changed, but the ways people experienced community had. These organized dinners offered a new way of meeting an old need.

From the late 1980s onward, more organizations began offering free Thanksgiving meals. When one organization could no longer continue, another would step forward. In 2017, Saving Grace Lutheran Church was among those answering the call!

What began as an effort to feed the hungry has grown into something that also nourishes the spirit – not only for those receiving a meal, but for those preparing and serving it as well. And perhaps that brings us to the words of Paul in Romans 12:13: "Share with the Lord's people who are in need. Practice hospitality." And THANK YOU to all the volunteers who are organizing, preparing, and serving this year's Thanksgiving meal!

A message from Pastor Dan Doran:

We welcome Hannah Grace Doran into the world on October 16th at 4:59 pm. Both Jamie and baby are healthy and doing well. Hannah stays hungry! The love, support, prayers, and food have been an amazing blessing to us as we juggle the responsibility of caring for "two under two." Sleep seems like a long lost relative that we haven't seen in a while. Even though we are tired all the time, we are also thankful for God's blessings and your support. It took a few days, but Joshua finally hugged Hannah out of his own free will a few days after we brought her home. Needless to say, we are all adjusting, but you all have been a much-needed blessing as we figure out how to be a family of four.

Thank you, Pastor Dan

Breaking the Law

by Katherine Altreuter

The other day I received some mail from Good News Global Jail Ministry. The Men of Saving Grace regularly support this ministry so every once in a while, a letter from them comes across my desk. Good News Global brings the Gospel and hope to those incarcerated so that they may find peace and redemption in Jesus Christ. The most recent letter talked about a man named Michael who as a young man was a warm and friendly individual. Early in adulthood he turned to alcohol and ended up in jail for an altercation. He said, "I didn't have a hard life. I made it hard!"

Michael was reunited with Christ while in jail. Unfortunately, his devout nature didn't last long after he was released a few months later. It took another pitfall and more support from the Good News Global ministry to get Michael's life and faith put back together.

While your own faith journey may not involve a few nights in jail, we have all broken the Law. And I don't just mean the law that our government has decided to judge us against in court, but the Law from God. We received Ten Commandments from God in the Old Testament, and this (along with later commandments) was how the old testament Jews built their spiritual lives. But instead of it helping them shape themselves into better believers, it twisted them into people like the Pharisees, who denied Christ because he didn't follow the Law "correctly."

Martin Luther says in The Bondage of the Will, "Yet how many Jews do you think there were, who though not having faith were most wise, religious, and virtuous men, and men who strove with might and main to attain to righteousness and truth?" We see this still today. Many people who fight against the evils of this world do not call the God their Father. They believe that as long as they are "good people" and strive for justice (within the laws of this world) that their work is done. That's good enough. Luther continues, "Even so they are transgressors of the law, because they are not Jews spiritually, and they stubbornly resist the righteousness of faith." Luther points out how no matter how good of a person you may be, your faith is what sanctifies you. It's not your works, but your willingness to submit to the Lord.

"For whoever keeps the whole law but fails in one point has become guilty of all of it" (James 2:10). We are not going to measure up with the Law. Laying aside how we morally feel about breaking the different Laws (telling a little lie vs. committing murder), God sees sin as all the same. You sin, you break the Law, you have fallen short of keeping the Law. So is it all hopeless, or do we have something else to look to?

Well, good news! Enter Jesus Christ, the Son of Man who died for our sins. He took upon the blame of our own transgressions to redeem us. With one caveat: faith. "But now we are released from the law, having died to that which held us captive, so that we serve in the new way of the Spirit and not in the old way of the written code" says Paul in Romans 6:6. We will never measure up against the Law. Strictly following the Law and not leaning on faith is how we fall short time and time again. None of us are immune to sin and temptation, but our redemption in submitting to the Lord is wholly dependent on our faith.

Paul continues on: "For I have the desire to do what is right, but not the ability to carry it out. For I do not do the good I want, but the evil I do not want is what I keep on doing. Now if I do what I do not want, it is no longer I who do it, but sin that dwells within me" (Rm. 7:18b-20). It isn't up to us as individuals to win every battle against sin. Martin Luther disproves our free choice with many examples from Romans and other New Testament books in The Bondage of the Will. We are sinners, we fall short, and yet God still has mercy upon us when we submit to Him. Our faith in Him and what comes of His will is enough.

Sometimes we need hope more than anything else. Michael needed it when he was incarcerated and Good News Global was able to give it to him. That's why ministry is so important. If I can help to deliver the Gospel, despite being a sinner myself yet knowing my faith in God makes me stronger in submitting to His will, then maybe others will believe, too. Because it's not about my works or what might make me a "good person," but wholly on my reliance on the Spirit to redeem me within Christ.

7th Annual Awareness & Fundraising Event
