Celebrating Jennifer’s 5-Year Work Anniversary!

On September 1, we celebrate an important milestone for Jennifer Henderson: five years of ministry and service on staff at Epiphany! Over the past five years, Jennifer has helped countless members, guests, and families feel welcomed, seen, and connected. Her heart for people and commitment to creating a welcoming church experience have made a lasting impact on our congregation.

In honor of her five-year work anniversary, we asked Jennifer to share five things you may not know about her:

1. She Loves to Travel. Jennifer loves exploring new places and making memories through travel with her family. Some of her favorite moments come from the stories and laughter that happen along the way.

2. Dayton Is the Longest She's Ever Lived Anywhere. After a lifetime of moving from place to place, Jennifer finally found what feels like home. Raised in a military family and later married to a service member, frequent relocations were simply a way of life. After spending two years in the Netherlands for her husband Landon's military assignment, the Henderson family returned to the U.S. and asked their sons, Brooks and Cooper, where they wanted to put down roots. The answer was easy: back to Epiphany and this community that had already captured their hearts. Seven years later, Jennifer can say something she never could before, this is the longest she has ever lived anywhere.

3. Military Life Has Always Been Part of Her Story. As the daughter of a service member and later a military spouse, Jennifer has spent virtually her entire life connected to the military. After graduating from Stephen F. Austin State University, there was only a six-week window before her marriage to Landon when she was not a military dependent or spouse.

4. She's Never Eaten a Microwave Meal. Yes, really! Jennifer shared that she has never eaten a microwave meal. It's one of those fun facts that surprises almost everyone who hears it.

5. She Attended Three Different High Schools. Moving so often meant Jennifer attended three different high schools, including changing schools during her senior year. While frequent moves made it difficult to establish long-term roots in one place, she still maintains a treasured friendship from those years, proving that some connections last a lifetime.

Leveraging her education and experience in hospitality, Jennifer built a successful career that included serving as Director of Sales for Hilton in North Charleston, South Carolina, and as a restaurant manager at The Mills House in downtown Charleston. Today, she brings that same hospitality mindset to her work at Epiphany, helping people feel welcomed, cared for, and connected within our church community. She shares, "One of the things I love most is interacting with members, helping them feel seen and heard, and making them feel at home here as much as I do."

Please join us in congratulating Jennifer on five years of faithful service to Epiphany. We are grateful for her dedication, her caring spirit, and the many ways she helps our church feel like home.

Happy 5-Year Work Anniversary, Jennifer! 🎉
